

Ogden Parkway/ Centennial Trail Construction

Description: The project entails purchasing three parcels of land from the railroad to allow completion of the Ogden River Parkway Trail and the Centennial Trail. The trail will connect with existing trails already established in the city's of West Haven and Riverdale. The final trail will be a 28.2 mile loop that joins into the mouth of Ogden Canyon along both rivers to the mouth of Weber Canyon.

Location: Ogden City near Interstate 15.

Acreage: 15.62 acres

Grant funding: $60,000

Total Project Cost: $150,000

Grant Awarded: October 2003

Partners: Ogden City Corporation, Utah Dept. of Natural Resources, Division of Water Rights, Utah Division of Wildlife, Northern Regional Office

Local Support: Ogden Trails Network Committee, Weber Pathways

Conservation Easement Held by: Utah Department of Natural Resources

Public Benefits

Recreational: The Parkway/Centennial Trail was planned to provide a variety of recreational opportunities and still retain the natural habitat and environment of the river. With the adoption of the Ogden River Master Plan, Ogden City Corporation in conjunction with the private sector embarked on establishing and developing an Ogden River Parkway Trail System. This system was designed to incorporate a trail and park system that would provide recreational and educational amenities to citizens within the community.
